Then onto Roma known for Gas and Oil production. The most famous attraction in Roma would undoubtedly be the Big Rig, here you will learn all about Australia’s history in Oil and Gas exploration. From the first gas find in Roma over a 100 years ago, through to todays multi billion dollar industry, the museum houses a collection of photos, facts, stories and equipment which piece together the industry as a whole. Roma is also home to Australia’s largest cattle sales, in the unique atmosphere of a true outback experience. Worthy of a visit whilst in Roma is the Courthouse (est.1901), Mt Abundance Homestead, Meadowbank Museum and Roma Avenue of Heroes. The present courthouse replaced the original, which held one of outback Australia’s most famous trials. The legend of Harry Redford was brought to public notice in Roma’s courthouse 2 years after he was charged with the theft of 1000 head of cattle from Bowen Station near Longreach. Redford however stole the cattle and drove them through country where no man had conquered, with an eventual sale in South Australia. Among the herd was one bull in particular, an unmistakable big white bull that gave the whole game away. Even with damning evidence against Redford, it is believed that the jurors were so captivated by his bush skills, daring and panache, that he was found not guilty and let walk a free man, going on to successfully manage several large properties and perhaps bask in the ‘glory’ of being Australia’s “King of the Cattle Duffers”.

The fertile river flats are dotted with old tobacco barn relics from a colorful past where grape vines now flourish alongside orchards, vegetables, peanuts and a myriad of other agricultural crops. Texas was named over a land claim in the 1850s which bore many similarities to one happening in Republic of Texas and Mexico in the United States at the same time. The original town was established on the river flats in 1875 but was relocated after the disastrous floods of 1890 and 1921. Remnants of the original historic township still exist for visitors to see.
